On February 11, 1990, people around the world watched as Nelson Mandela, with a clenched-fist sign of solidarity raised triumphantly, left prison where 27 years of his life had been taken.

The man was unbroken, without compromise, and unrelenting in his commitment to ending the brutal racist system of apartheid of his nation, South Africa. A half-century of lawful white rule over the overwhelming black majority was about to end.

Mandela was free.

On this Fourth of July weekend, you are invited to see an uplifting film about the man who most represented a revolutionary movement of costly struggle and hope for millions of people in South Africa—black and white—and inspired millions more around the world.

Golden Globe-winner Idris Elba stars as Nelson Mandela in this in-depth biopic that portrays the South African leader from his rural childhood through his long imprisonment to his election as the country's first black president.

2014. 146 minutes. Rated PG-13. Stars Idris Elba and Naomie Harris. English, Xhosa, and Afrikaans, with English subtitles. Director: Justin Chadwick. Screenplay: William Nicholson, based on the book Long Walk to Freedom by Nelson Mandela. United Kingdom and South Africa. Music: Alex Heffes and U2.
