A Man for All Seasons

A Man for All Seasons, the 1966 classic film, is about conscience, faith, and political power, told through the inspiring story of Thomas More, chancellor to King Henry VIII.

In this centuries-old tale, the king demands More's approval to divorce Catherine of Aragon and marry Anne Boleyn. He believes More can sway the Catholic Church to permit the divorce.

However, Thomas More (Paul Scofield), refuses to give in, which would imperil his soul. His outspoken unwillingness to break with the Catholic Church makes Henry VIII (Robert Shaw) look way out of line. The King is furious and resorts to threats and trickery, but More resists all pressure and resigns, hoping to live out his life in peace.

That isn't going to happen, and the enraged king presses his supreme power while More sits alone in the Tower. The dramatic ending leaves the viewer with an indelible image of integrity and a charge to live up to one's own principles in a corrupt world.

A Man for All Seasons was a critical and box office success, winning Academy Awards for Best Picture, Best Director for Fred Zinnemann, Best Actor for Scofield, and international awards.
